

ZMATH 2016e.00561

Wang, Qiao

Mathematical patterning activities in the early grades.

Ohio J. Sch. Math. 73, 37-42 (2016).

Summary: This article discusses the importance of patterning in early mathematics study for young children and describes some patterning activities for pre-kindergarten classes to motivate young children to explore the mathematics through observing and creating their own patterns.

Classification: F21 G21 C31

Keywords: pre-school education; primary education; teaching; patterns; patterning activities; young children; early childhood education; linear repeating patterns; hopscotch pattern; growing patterns; visualization