

ZMATH 2015d.00017

Ramsden, Jenny

Jean-Baptiste-Joseph Fourier.

SYMmetryplus 56, 9-11 (2015).

The article presents a short portrayal of the life and scientific work of the French mathematician and mathematical physicist Joseph Fourier (1768–1830) who is famous for his statement that any function across the interval $(-\pi, \pi)$ could be represented by a trigonometric series, today called a Fourier series.

Peter Dürr (Linkenheim)

Classification: A30

Keywords: history of mathematics; mathematicians; biographies; mathematics in the 18th century; mathematics in the 19th century; theory of heat