Migration matrices and Leslie matrices are two popular applications of matrices. In this article, these two applications are worked out using real data. The diffusion of the euro coins is modelled with a migration matrix and the evolution of the Belgian population is studied with Leslie matrices. The long-run evolution of this population is used as a context wherein eigenvalues and eigenvectors are introduced.

Classification: K64 M74 H64 D84